

A 2003 graduate of the 5 year Master's Program in Economics, Lory Ellebracht-Fehlig gained a variety of experiences as an MU student that prepared her for opportunities in both the public and private sectors. She acknowledges the importance of the many internship opportunities provided by MU, having benefited from spending her summers exploring options across the country. First working in Chicago for SAS, a statistical software company, then in Washington DC as an intern for the Congressional Budget Office, and finally being chosen for the Civic Leader's Internship program in Jefferson City all providing excellent foundations for moving easily into the job market. After graduating, she has had the opportunity to work around the country at places including Sandia National Laboratories, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and Hallmark Cards. Currently the Liberty, Mo., native is working for H&R Block's Corporate Analytic group. She resides in Kansas City, Mo. with her husband, Edward, and their adorable baby girl, Marianne.
